

AYLESBURY, the County Town of Buckinghamshire, has long been famous for the Aylesbury Duck, a breed which is particularly succulent and suitable for the table.

The Aylesbury Duck Dinner was therefore re-instituted in Coronation Year by the then Mayor of Aylesbury (A. J. Sage, Esq., J.P.) with a view to bringing again into a proper degree of importance the Aylesbury Duck.

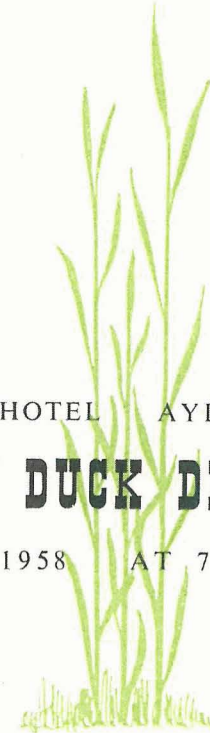

The Aylesbury Duck has earned its reputation for being the finest of table ducks because of its ability to reach maturity for the table at between eight to ten weeks of age. The 70 ducks consumed this evening were from a batch of 100 reared from one day old by John M. A. Paterson, Esq., a Director of The Bifurcated and Tubular Rivet Company Limited, at his home, Potter Row, Great Missenden. They each weighed between 6 and 6½ lb., and between the ages of 5 and 9 weeks they consumed three-quarters of a hundredweight of food and 20 gallons of water per day between them.
